science.—Public Opinion.
There is sonje reason for apprehension that the Statehood movement in Utah, here tofore believed to be certain of success, may be dated, after all, by the latervantion of the Mormon heirarchy which to long ruided the Territory which to long ruided the Territory in an arbitrary way. It is generally believed that polygamy has been abandoned by the Mormons, with a few unimportant exceptions and that the Church does not con and that the Church does not con template the revival of it at an future time; but this latest move of the priesthood is calculated t raise a suspicion of insincerity i and to prevent the execution of the anti-polygamy laws. The Mormon heirarchy has in times past shown and to prevent the execution of the anti-polygamy laws. The Mormon heirarchy has in times past abown itself capable of such duplishing, and there are those who believe that it is no better now than it was then. It is true that President Woodruff and his associated sizelam" all his etention to dictate to the numbers of the Church with regard to their political preferences and interests, and insist that the only thing aimed at is proper religious discipliers but the doubt remains, all the summan, and it is sufficiently strong to give the total the summan of the control of the control of the Mormon priesthood in all the relations of the Mormon priesthood in all the relations of life would be the worst of calamities. It was absolute deepotism while it lasted, and its hold was relaxed only after a long and severe targegic, in which Federal anthority was the decisive force.—St. Louis Globe Democrat.

There is religion in the politics.

Louis Globe Democrat.

There is religion in the politics of Utah, and Mormonism is a power in both parties there. If any other religion exercised as large a measure of control in the politics of Usah State as the Mormon religion exercised in the politics of Utah there would surely be a popular revolt against that control.—New York Sun.
